Instructions

Please select a developing or least developing country as defined by Kebede-Francis, and compare and contrast the efficacy of applying the biomedical, social, and political economy approaches to public health in the country you have selected? Address the historical, socio-cultural, political, governmental, and economic factors that have influenced this country's current level of development. Include an analysis of the successes and failures of at least one governmental and one non-governmental entity to address a population health problem in this country. What structural characteristics of governmental and non-governmental organizations influenced the outcome of the initiative you have cited.

This assignment should be approximately 6 to 8 pages long excluding cover, abstract, and references pages. APA format is required.
